

Palazzo Bevilacqua Ariosti

Overview

The Palazzo Bevilacqua Ariosti is located in via D'Azeglio and was built between 1477 and 1482. In particular, its importance derives from the decision by Paul III in 1547 to transfer a number of meetings of the Council of Trento.

It is distinguished by its non-Bologna architectonic style, particularly notable in the absence of a portico. A splendid courtyard is located inside. It was subjected to restoration works under Alfonso Rubbiani at the beginning of the 20th century. Cocktails, gala receptions, exclusive exhibitions and film shoots can be held in the Salons. The venue is not open for visits except on special occasions.
